The department of gender and social department derives its mandate from Presidential Circular No 1 of September 2004. The department of gender and social assigned the responsibility of improving the efficiency and effective integration of gender dimensions in future policy formulation, planning and implementation. It is therefore responsible for providing a technical base for gender mainstreaming through the national sectoral approach and implementation of recommendations of international conventions.

Justification for a gender policy for the Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Development

The Kenya National Policy on Gender and Development (NPGD), 2000 spells out a policy approach of Gender mainstreaming and empowerment of women and clearly states that it is the right of women, men, girls and boys to participate in and benefit equally from the development process. The NPGD provides a framework for mainstreaming gender in all policies, planning and programming in Kenya and puts in place institutional mechanisms to ensure effective implementation.

The need for a national policy arose from the government's realisation that without a coherent and comprehensive overall framework for guiding gender mainstreaming within the different sectors and line ministries involved in development, enormous resources may continue to be misplaced. The Department of Gender and Social Development was established in December 2006 following the merger between the Departments of Gender and Social Services. The overall mandate of the Department of Gender and Social Development is to promote gender equality and women's empowerment through gender mainstreaming in the development process, capacity building, social protection, community participation and public – private partnerships. These strategies are informed by and consistent with the objectives of the flagship projects under the social pillar of the Kenya Vision 2030⁵.

⁵ Professor Collette Suda, Secretary for Gender and Social Development

PREAMBLE

The vision of the Ministry is “A society where women, men, children and persons with disabilities enjoy equal rights, opportunities and a high quality of life.”⁶ The Ministry firmly believes that women, men, girls and boys are actors in and beneficiaries of development. Through this policy, the Ministry seeks to deepen its work around understanding power relations and its dynamics so as to ultimately dismantle practices, institutions and structures that sustain inequality. Therefore this policy is intended to guide the Ministry in its work of leading positive transformations around the social order with a view of having equity, equality and full enjoyment of human rights for all.

In adopting the gender mainstreaming strategy, the Ministry is keenly aware that this strategy is utilized to bring deliberate attention on how women, men, girls and boys are ‘reached’, ‘influenced’, ‘affected’ and ‘involved’. Since research and experience confirm the importance of gender equality, not only as a fundamental human right, but also as essential to poverty reduction and improved living standards, sustainable economic growth, and effective and accountable governance. The Ministry notes that despite women’s essential productive and reproductive roles, they still have significantly less access than men to resources, assets, knowledge and community management and decision-making. Gender equality is crucial for socio economic development as well as the attainment of the Millennium Development Goals. From an economic efficiency lens, the Ministry is well aware that where gender inequalities in access and control over resources are persistent, they undermine sustainable and inclusive development. The framework for expansion has been the Kenya Vision 2030 and the Medium Term Plan (MTP), which has focused on rapid growth with macroeconomic stability, rehabilitation and expansion of infrastructure, investment in human capital, strengthening institutions of governance and revitalizing productive sectors. One of the key ways to mainstream gender in any organization is by formulating a Gender Policy.

THE PURPOSE

The purpose of this Ministerial Gender Policy is to institutionalize The Kenya National Policy on Gender and Development (NPGD), 2000 within the Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Development. It articulates the policy approach of gender mainstreaming and empowerment of women at the ministry level. This policy is designed to provide a framework for the conceptualization, design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation of the Ministry’s programmes. This policy shall be applied internally, by the Ministry, and externally with partners.

⁶ Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Development Service Charter August 2008

CONTEXT

The purpose of this section is to provide an overview of the critical issues which impact Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Development's progression towards gender equality. This Gender Policy has been crafted in a dynamic service delivery environment. Overall, the Ministry of Gender Children and Social Development has been instrumental in shaping the gender equality and women's empowerment work in the last couple of years. Since 2000, there appears to have emerged some intensified energies that has resulted to several policy and programmatic initiatives. These include: the National Policy on Gender and Development (2000); Sessional Paper No.2 of May 2006 on Gender Equity and Development; Economic Recovery Strategy (2003 – 2007); the Medium Term Expenditure Framework; the Kenya Joint Assistance Strategy, Vision 2030 and the Millennium Development Goals amongst others. Whilst at the sectoral level there exists various gender responsive policy initiatives, including: Adolescent Reproductive Health and Development Policy and Plan of Action (2005-2015), Gender and Education Policy (2007), Kenya National Aids Programme 3 (KNASP3), Presidential directive on Affirmative Action, National Policy for the Abandonment of FGM/C amongst others⁷. The national machinery has provided policy leadership in a variety of activities that have advanced women's empowerment as well as working towards gender equality.

The context of this gender policy is inform by that despite women 50.29182%⁸ of the population provide percentage and accounting for a large voting population in Kenya, glaring gender gaps continue to confront them in terms of representation in decision making sites, in accessing and controlling resources and socioeconomic opportunities. The declining economic performance, poverty, erosion of cultural values and the post-election violence witnessed after the 2007 elections have resulted in increased vulnerabilities for the poor, marginalized and orphans irrespective of gender.

The concept of bringing gender issues into the mainstream of society has clearly been established as a global strategy for promoting gender equality in the Beijing Platform for Action. The BPFA highlights the necessity to ensure that gender equality is a primary goal in all areas of social and economic development⁹. Gender equality is therefore an agenda for development effectiveness. As new evidence demonstrates, when women and men are equal, economies tend to grow faster, the poor move quickly out of poverty, and the well-being of men, women, and children is enhanced¹⁰.

Gender mainstreaming is the current international approach to advancing gender equality and equity in society.¹¹ It requires revitalized government actions that involve incorporating a gender perspective into all policies, plans, programmes and projects to ensure that these impact on women and men in an equitable way.

The Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Development is guided by the national policy as the national machinery leading gender mainstreaming in the country, recognizes that in the past its work has proceeded without a gender policy. At the Ministry we have embraced gender mainstreaming as a programmatic approach whereby attention to gender equality is integrated into its programme analysis, planning, performance, policy, monitoring and evaluation. Therefore gender equality work must be visibly anchored on an internal accountability standard that influences the practices within the Ministry at organizational level. The current Strategic Plan of the Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Development has integrated the Performance and Results Based Management approach in the management of its programmes and relationships. In order to streamline and enhance the efficacy of the approaches of securing gender equity, equality and women's empowerment, this internal policy is adopted.

As the technical provider of gender knowledge, the Ministry has invested in the production of a variety of instruments to guide overall gender mainstreaming efforts in line ministries. Some of these include:

- Development of a Service Charter indicating service-related commitments to improve services in various areas;
- Development of a Training Manual on Gender Mainstreaming to co-ordinate and harmonize gender mainstreaming initiatives by various government and nongovernment actors;
- Development a monitoring and evaluation system to track gender mainstreaming in the country;
- Development of a National Plan of Action to Implement the Gender Policy (2008 – 2012);
- Development of a National Plan of Action for the Abandonment of Female Genital Mutilation (2008-2012), established a functional National Committee for the Abandonment of FGM/C (NaCAF) and Secretariat with strong support from civil society and development partners;
- Development and updating of the Kenya Gender Data sheet which produces vital information for national planning and programming through the sex disaggregated data on socio-economic welfare of women, men, girls and boys.

CONCEPTUAL FRAMEWORK AND STRATEGY

Conceptual Framework

This policy elaborates the key concepts and approaches that underpin gender and development issues. The Ministry's interpretation of gender equality work recognizes that inequitable gender relations cannot be addressed by focusing on women in isolation and that men too can be prone to gender vulnerabilities. Mainstreaming includes gender-specific activities and affirmative action whenever women or men are in a particularly disadvantageous position. Therefore we conceptualize our strategic policy and programmatic priorities recognizing that gender-specific interventions can target women exclusively, men and women together or only men, to enable them to participate in and benefit equally from development efforts. These are necessary temporary measures designed to combat the direct and indirect consequences of past discrimination.

As a holistic and comprehensive strategy, gender mainstreaming also addresses the environment (corporate, office) in which policies and programmes are developed and implemented. Thus a policy to integrate gender concerns into programming must be accompanied by a strategy to ensure that staff and the working environment is gender-sensitive, guaranteeing equal opportunities and treatment of both men and women.

Any strategy or intervention on gender equality and women's empowerment must begin with an accurate analysis and understanding of the context, realities and experiences of women and men. Towards this end in the Plan of Action for the National Policy on Gender and Development (2000), specific thematic activities which have been identified and prioritized include the need to:

- a) Identify, map out and prioritize gender issues in the sector Ministries and parastatals
- b) Review proposed activities and harmonize with sector realities
- c) Build relevant capacities to mainstream gender
- d) Identify linkages and networks
- e) Coordinate sector implementation of gender strategic activities
- f) Produce gender mainstreaming sector reports
- g) Profile gender issues in all sectors.

GUIDING PRINCIPLES

This policy is constructed on the following guiding principles:

- 1) The Constitution of Kenya is the guiding document
- 2) Women's rights are human rights
- 3) Gender fairness and justice guides interventions
- 4) Equity in treatment of women, girls, men and boys as well as equal opportunities to access national resources
- 5) Recognition of the specificity of women, men girls and boys in order to ensure - promote and protect Fairness in the treatment of different categories of women and noting that they are not homogeneous and their circumstances vary
- 6) Promoting economic empowerment for women
- 7) Affirmative action interventions targeting women be developed as a corrective measure to equalize opportunities and access
- 8) Commitment to change discriminatory laws, policies and practices
- 9) Appropriate and relevant training provided to improve knowledge, skills and attitudes towards gender equality
- 10) Enhanced relationships and synergies between the departments and at all levels within the national machinery for securing gender equality work.
- 11) Treaties and conventions which have been ratified in Kenya

POLICY FRAMEWORK: GOAL AND OBJECTIVE

The overall goal of this Policy Framework is to mainstream gender concerns in the national development process in order to improve the social, legal/civic, economic and cultural conditions of women, men, girls and boys in Kenya. Progress towards gender equality depends upon strategic and well-targeted interventions. The policy provides direction for setting priorities. An important priority is to ensure that all ministerial strategies and their performance frameworks integrate gender equality objectives and indicators and identify actions for tackling inequality. In addition, each program will develop integrated gender equality strategies at the initiative level in priority areas. Within selected interventions, the policy will also scale-up specific initiatives to advance gender equality.

This ministerial gender policy will be pursued within the context of its stated mandate, which is to “provide services and coordination to the public on issues of gender, children and social development.”

The National Policy on Gender and Development provides a basis for the Government to underscore its commitment to advancing the status of women. The Government of Kenya is determined to address any existing imbalances through policy formulation and implementation taking into account different needs and skills of men and women. Poverty reduction will provide the broad framework within which strategic actions to achieve gender equality will be taken and due account will be given to the critical areas of action for women’s empowerment elaborated in the Dakar and Beijing Platform of Actions (PFAs).

The Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Development will provide policy direction, implement and coordinate gender mainstreaming as a strategy for attaining gender equity and equality within all the other Ministries and public bodies. The department recognizes that inequitable gender relations cannot be addressed by focusing on women in isolation. The practical needs and strategic interests of both women and men have to be considered, as do the opportunities and constraints emanating from the local, national, regional and international context in which they live. This policy assures a minimum package for quality assurance in promoting gender equality work to support and guide the design, implementation, monitoring and evaluation processes within the Ministry, line ministries and state corporations.

THE GOAL

The overall goal is to strengthen gender equality work in the Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Development by establishing a clear vision around delivering its services, policies, procedures and practices based on equality between women and men. Ultimately this policy will work towards ensuring gender equality and women’s empowerment and mainstreaming of needs and concerns of women, men, girls and boys in all sectors of development in the country so that they can participate and benefit equally from development initiatives

Within programmatic focus, all Ministry deliverables and results shall demonstrate the extent to which they have fulfilled and integrated the four equality dimensions. In addition, this pillar entails relationship building across all line ministries, with the civil society and private sector

ii. Institutional focus

This deals with the Ministry's role as an employer and its decision-making systems and practices. The components within the institution work towards the creation of an enabling environment for women and men (gender sensitive/responsive) in order to meet the specific gender needs of women and men.
